Kit you can have sex during that time of the month with zero mess. Comes with two sea sponge tampons (which, when inside you, replicate your natural lady parts) with reusable cotton bag, bodacious body butter that's lube and massage oil, tea tree oil (a natural antiseptic for the sponges) and a dark chocolate bar with a love poem inside. ($28, jazzsandpearl.com)

Kick It Up a Notch: KY is probably the best-known over-the-counter lube. But make no mistake, their newest product is definitely not meant to replace your lube. That doesn't mean it isn't a Arousal Gel is a tiny lipstick-sized tube of gel that, when dabbed down there, increases the sensation in the clitoris. How? Turns out, your little kitty clitty has about 8,000 nerve endings and when KY Intense—whose main ingredient is Niacin (aka vitamin B3)—is applied, it increases blood flow to the clitoris. A second ingredient causes a women reach orgasm sooner. In anecdotal reports, women who aren't 20 and ready to pop at the site of an Amanda Seyfried poster already—say peri-menopausal women or lesbians with disabilities, for example—are especially thrilled with the results of KY Intense. And the cost? Well, at about $1 per application, it's still cheaper than Viagra. (kystorage.com)
